REPUBLIC SPECIAL Good Ground, L. I., N. Y., July 2.-Three went down to Tiana Bay and only one returned. Of the three, Clarence Poster and "Dimple" Lawrence were found dead, floating in the water, four days later. The third, Louis Dishrow, fied Good Ground. At the water's edge a violent quarrel was indulged in. Disbrow threatened his companions, and particularly Foster, upon whom his anger centered.

That was the story told to-day at the preliminary examination of Louis Disbrow, who now stands charged with premeditated murder. There were embellishments, and much of tragic interest was told, but the practical result of the day's effort was that Dishrow was seen in the company of Foster and Miss Lawrence immediately before their death, and upon his lips were placed words of threat. At the close of the afternoon session District Attorney Smith expressed himself well satisfied with what had been done. adding that he had disposed of his weakest witness

He then made it plain that his post-mortem examination had been of a most care-less character. The same carelessness char-acterized the post-mortem examination of the body of "Dimple" Lawrence. Coroner Nugent was satisfied with a few glances at her head and neck.

Much surprise was expressed by all in the courtroom when Nugent denied that he had found so much as an abrasion of the face of Clarence Foster. He had repeatedly discussed the undoubted wound over Fos-ter's right eye, and it was to further examine this wound that he ordered the dis-interment of Foster's body. Immediately after he left the stand a witness was called to testify, and who did testify, of conver sations with Nugent regarding the wound

First in importance of all the witne was Miss Anna Pearsall, who told of the quarrel between Disbrow and Foster. She it was who said that the two men and "Dimple" Lewrence went together to Tiana. Shortly after, I heard footsteps going down the stairs, and I heard the slam of the door leading out on the front porc After that I heard some one going up the stairs very heavily and very fast. WORKERS AVERTED.

ment Between Brewers and the Eight Unions Involved.

Contracts Call for Increase of Pay and Shorter Hours-Agreements Will Hold for Three Years.

After a six hours' conference, an agreement was reached between the brewers of St. Louis and the brewery workers yesterday afternoon, by which all danger of a strike and a consequent shortage of beer s postponed for at least three years. The employers and the unions tovolved are now satisfied, and the final contracts between them will be signed this morning in the offices of the St. Louis Brewing Association in the Wainwright building. At the legioning of the meeting it enceded that the situation looked anything but hopeful. But both sides made concessions after much arguing on the many points in the separate sets of demands presented by eight dons. The engineers withdrew their remest for vacations, the bottlers accepted a nine-hour day, the laborers a nine-hoday and the ollers a ten-hour day. On ther hand reductions in the length of the former workday were made by the proprie-tors, and increases in pay were allowed, which mean an additional $25,000 g year to

All Unions Represented. The representatives of the unions as-sembled at the Brewing Association offices at 2 o'clock. Three men represented the Freight Handlers' and Ice Fullers' Union. Three men came from the Laborers' Union; two from the Engineers' and two from the Firemen's; two from the Bottlers'; two from the Oflers'; two from the Drivers' and two from the Brewers' and Maltsters Present also were members of the Joint Executive Committee of the United Brew-ery Workers, and Secretary Zorn of the National Association. They were met either by the proprietors themselves or by officials of all the broweries in the city. Besides the breweries in the syndicate, which is represented by the St. Louis Brewing Association, there were representatives in at-tendance from Lemp's, Anneuser-Busch, the American, the Empire brewery and Gast's breweries.

The demands of the various unions were onesidered in turn. The chief delay arose a settling with the bottlers and offers. The considered in turn. The chief delay arose in settling with the bottlers and ollers. The former usunanded among other things "a quart of wholesame beet" at 2 a. m., il a. m., at lunch, at 3 p. m., at 5 p. m., at 4 o'clock and every two hours thereafter. The brewers absolutely refused to allow free beer to this extent, but were willing to increase their pay to the scale of $15 a week in summer. $14.50 in winter, with a nine-hour day. This compromise was finally agreed upon.

The ollers, who previously had had no specified workday, accepted a ten-hour day and an increase of $1.50 a month, making their salaries $2.50 a month. The laborers are guaranteed nine hours and an increase of 3 cents an hour. The assistant engineers receive an increase of $2 a week, making their pay $20 a week.

The settlement of all the minor point was effected about a clock in the evening President Otto Stife! of the Brewers' Asso-ciation then stated that the conclusion was ciation then stated that the conclusion was satisfactory to all.

"The contracts are not yet signed," said he, "but will be to-day. We conceded much as we wish willing workmen, but there were some points upon which we had to stand firm. The contracts now to be closed cover a three-year period and we expect no more disagreement in this time. Previously we had an annual arrangement, but decided that a more lasting understanding was absolutely necessary."
